

Team Building Town Hall

Lieutenant Colonel Christopher Grice held his first town hall and upon arrival there was something eerily different. We didn't get to sit with our closest work friends, we had assigned seating! People were buzzing with the, "what is going on" question.

He was giving us a visual for teambuilding. Grice said, "Counsel, train, evaluate, retrain, and learn from the good and bad" are skills for creating successful teams. We may not always work with people who are like us. People are different. We have different backgrounds, cultures, economic status, race, education, religion and experience, but at the end of the day, we have the same concerns.

Grice used an example from one of his previous assignments in Saudi Arabia. He met with the locals and after spending time with them, he was able to look beyond the barriers of our cultures.

He realized people's core concerns are the same. They care about their families and community.

Grice said his job is to ensure that we are all successful. To do that we must treat people with dignity and respect, use the chain of command, communicate, team build, and exercise the Army Values.

Bobby Melson and his team win the Paper Cup Tower Challenge!
